MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

It gives me great pleasure to introduce the Media Guide for the 2012 Olympic Tennis Event.

As one of the original sports at the first modern Games in Athens in 1896, tennis has a long Olympic history and this year marks the 24th anniversary of its return to the Olympic Games as a full medal sport. Having withdrawn from the Olympics after the Paris Games in 1924, tennis was absent until Seoul in 1988, when it was readmitted thanks to the combined efforts of former ITF President Philippe Chatrier, General Secretary David Gray and former ITF Vice President Pablo Llorens in addition to the great support of the then IOC President Juan-Antonio Samaranch.

Tennis has always been one of the most universal of sports and the ITF has over 200 member nations who all benefit from our association with the Olympics. Our national associations receive support from their governments and National Olympic Committees that would not be available to them without our affiliation with the Olympic Games. In addition, tennis has benefited from the grass roots support provided worldwide through Olympic Solidarity.

I am sure that the All England Lawn Tennis Club in Wimbledon will witness tennis of the highest quality as the world's best players compete for one of the most-coveted prizes in sport – an Olympic gold medal.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the IOC, LOCOG and the incredible number of people who have worked so hard to make these Games a success. I wish everyone involved in this event – the players, officials, media, volunteers and spectators – an enjoyable and rewarding tournament.

TENNIS IN THE OLYMPICS

BY CHRIS BOWERS

Charlotte Cooper (GBR)

By choosing the All England Club for the 2012 Olympic tennis event, the London Olympics have taken tennis back to where it was played 104 years ago when the Games were first in the British capital. Or perhaps not exactly – in 1908, the All England Club was at Worple Road, about half an hour's walk from the current Wimbledon site.

Then there were two tennis events. The All England Club hosted the outdoor event, while London's other historic tennis venue, the Queen's Club, staged an indoor event. The British were dominant in both, and the outdoor event saw Reginald Doherty claim a third Olympic gold medal when winning the men's doubles title.

Tennis is responsible for several milestones in Olympic history. An Irishman John Boland, competing for a combined Great Britain and Ireland team in the inaugural modern Olympics in Athens in 1896, was the first Olympic tennis champion, taking gold in both singles and doubles events. Women weren't allowed to compete in those Games (as was the custom in the ancient Olympics), but they were admitted four years later in Paris, when Charlotte Cooper became the first woman to win an Olympic gold medal in any sport, when she won the women's singles. And Suzanne Lenglen became the most dominant Olympic champion in 1920 when she claimed gold for the loss of just four games all tournament.

1896 Athens Olympics

Suzanne Lenglen (FRA)

Given tennis's prominence in the early years of the modern Olympiad, it seems strange that the sport was excluded for 64 years. And the reasons still aren't entirely clear.

The 1924 Paris Games saw a superb tennis event, but one riddled with underlying tension between the tennis and Olympic families. Instead of entrusting the tennis event to the national tennis association (as was increasingly the custom in Olympic sports), the French Olympic committee ran the tennis on what was described as a piece of waste ground near the main Stade Colombes Olympic stadium. The facilities were very basic, much less than players were by then used to, and morale plummeted. Immediately after the Games, the International Lawn Tennis Federation presented a list of four demands to the IOC, including the IOC withdrawing its request that Wimbledon be not staged during Olympic years. When the IOC rejected all four demands, the ILTF had no choice but to pull out, although the fact that it took until 1927 for the decision to be made suggests there was some deep-rooted reluctance.

TENNIS IN THE OLYMPICS

Yevgeny Kafelnikov (RUS)

Mark Woodforde and Todd Woodbridge (AUS)

◀ A split would have come eventually, because tennis went 'open' nearly two decades before the Olympics. But the spirit evoked by the Olympic flame was never wholly extinguished. Tennis appeared as a demonstration sport in Mexico in 1968, and then a determined campaign led by David Gray, then General Secretary of the ITF, with enthusiastic support from the ITF president, Philippe Chatrier, saw tennis return as a 21-and-under demonstration event at in 1984. The success of that event made it a formality for tennis to return to the Olympics as a full medal sport at the Seoul Games in 1988.

It took a while for a generation of players who had grown up without tennis as an Olympic sport to fully warm to it, but by the Atlanta Games of 1996, the ground had clearly shifted. The two singles gold medallists in Atlanta, Andre Agassi and Lindsay Davenport, both had parents who had been Olympians, as had Leander Paes, who won the men's singles bronze medal. The medals clearly meant massive amounts to them. By the time Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde won their doubles gold in Atlanta, they had won six Grand Slam men's doubles titles, including four Wimbledons, but it was the Olympic gold that took their recognition back home in Australia to a new level. And Yevgeny Kafelnikov was Roland Garros champion in 1996, Australian Open champion in 1999 and topped the world rankings for six weeks in 1999, yet nothing ignited the satisfaction back home in Russia more than his gold at the 2000 Sydney Games.

But the Athens tennis event will long be remembered for one country, Chile, and one man in particular, Nicolas Massu. The man from Vina del Mar overcame Mardy Fish in the final to claim the men's singles gold medal less than 24 hours after he and Fernando Gonzalez had won Chile its first-ever Olympic gold in the men's doubles.

Nicolas Massu and Fernando Gonzalez (CHI)

Next stop was Beijing, in 2008, and it was a case of Russian domination in the women's singles as Elena Dementieva, Dinara Safina and Vera Zvonareva sealed an impressive clean sweep of gold, silver and bronze. In the men's singles, Rafael Nadal added an Olympic gold to his ever expanding trophy cabinet.

The women's doubles gold medal went, for the second time in their career, to Venus and Serena Williams. The Swiss pairing of Roger Federer and Stanislas Wawrinka won the gold medal after a four-set win over Sweden's Simon Aspelin and Thomas Johansson, but it was Federer's tears on the podium that captured the public's imagination. Here was the most successful player in the history of the men's game crying through the sheer joy of winning for his country on the world's biggest stage.

Tennis is well and truly back in the Olympic fold, and ready to make more history on the grass of Wimbledon.

Note: The 1906 silver and bronze medals in the men's singles and mixed doubles were awarded on the basis of the best performances against the winner or runner-up rather than as losing finalists or winner of the losing semifinalist play-off. Therefore the men's singles bronze was awarded to Zdenek Zemla who had taken a set off the silver medalist Maurice Germot in the round of 16. The mixed doubles silver was awarded to Georgios Simiriotis/Sophia Marinou as they had taken nine games off the champions in the semifinal, and the bronze medal went to the losing finalists who had won one game less. The women's singles and men's doubles however did have the usual bronze play-off.

Miscellaneous

Gigi Fernandez and Mary Joe Fernandez (USA) are the only players to successfully defend an Olympic tennis title, winning the women's doubles gold medal in 1992 and 1996.

Conchita Martinez (ESP) is the only tennis player to win medals at three different Olympic Games, winning silver in 1992, bronze in 1996, and silver in 2004, all in the women's doubles event.

Five men and two women have won three medals at the same Olympics:

Laurence Doherty (GBR), Reginald Doherty (GBR) and Harold Mahony (GBR) - 1900

Charles Dixon (GBR) - 1912

Vincent Richards (USA), Suzanne Lenglen (FRA) and Kathleen McKane (GBR) - 1920

This was only possible in Paris (1900) and Stockholm (1912) for men and at Antwerp (1920) and Paris (1924) for both men and women, as these are the only occasions that a mixed doubles event has been held.
